2005 Energy Policy Act

The 2005 Energy Policy Act provides accelerated tax deduction incentives for energy efficient lighting upgrades completed in 2006 or 2007. Reduce your overall lighting costs & display your commitment to environmental stewardship by using GE eco-magination products which significantly reduce energy consumption. Contact your Leff Salesperson to receive more information on how to meet the 2005 Energy Policy Act.

Occupancy Sensors

Leviton offers a wide selection of motion sensors that use passive infrared, ultrasonic or a combined multi-sensing technology. Occupancy Sensors provide automatic ON/OFF switching of lighting loads for enhanced convenience, security and long-term energy savings. The Passive Infrared (PIR) units respond to changes in the infrared background by turning lights ON when people enter space being monitored, and OFF when the space is unoccupied. The Ultrasonic (US) units transmit an ultrasound signal and monitor changes in the signals return time to detect occupancy. Multi-Technology units combine PIR and US sensing technologies for highly accurate monitoring with minimum false triggering. There are Leviton sensors for monitoring conference rooms, restrooms, stockrooms, stairwells and parking garages in commercial and institutional facilities, and there are also sensors designed for monitoring porches, patios, hallways and backyards in residential settings.
